Office Hours: Wednesdays 10-12, 5-7 and by appointment

Course Overview

Organizing is how people come together to pursue their collective interests. Organizing is moving people into Relationship, Reflection, Story-telling, Leadership, Team-Building and Action in order to:

- Build their collective power
- Take greater control over their own lives
- Achieve shared goals

It is a life skill that students will need no matter the field they end up pursuing or the community in which they end up settling.

How do people come together, build a base and take action to win on the issues they care about? What is power, how does power operate and how do organizations build it and leverage it to win?

The curriculum and examples are drawn from my twenty-plus years working as an organizer and trainer before entering academia and from classics of organizing, political science, sociology, management, urban studies, economics, public policy and anthropology that shed light on key ideas. I'm always adding to it and welcome your suggestions.

The course will cover the building blocks of organizing including:

- Recruitment and Building the Organization
- Forms of Power
- Public Narrative
- Strategic Research and Power Analysis
- Strategy
- Effective Actions and Turnout
- Building Teams
- Coaching

We will read both practical and scholarly work on these topics and explore them through class discussions, exercises, and roleplays.

Learning Objective – Rutgers' CORE:

CCD-2. Analyze contemporary social justice issues and unbalanced social power systems.

The Instructors' Learning Objectives of this course are to:

- 1) Examine critically the theory and practice of organizing
- 2) Learn a set of concrete organizing skills
- 3) Analyze the role of direct action organizing as an empowerment strategy in disadvantaged and marginalized communities and think about its relationship to broader movements for social change.
- 4) Engage in dialogue and debate around issues of power, inequality, organizing, and politics
- 5) Understand theoretical perspectives on concepts related to organizing drawn from political science, sociology, history, anthropology, urban planning, and political theory
- 6) Write an essay that puts forward an argument

Course Requirements:

Weekly Reaction Papers:

In order to help prepare for discussions during class, students will submit one page of written reflections on at least two of the readings as well as the class presentations, discussions and exercises each week through the Canvas assignment portal.

- These papers must be handed in on the day they are due (AKA the day prior to that week's class).
- You have the option to skip TWO weeks of your choice.

Organizing Practicum:

In order to receive full credit for this course (3+1=4 credits), you can choose a campus organizing organization or off-campus organizing organization and actively participate in it over the course of the semester including planning, organizing and participating in at least one action or conducting ten one-on-one meetings and building a functional team in an organization. The Teaching Assistants and I are available to help with matching you to organizations.

You may also work with peers from this class to organize your own campaign.

Students need to register for the 4th credit within the first two weeks. You must choose an organization and notify me of your choice by September 14th and begin working with the group from that week on. You will submit one paragraph of a description of what you have been doing and your reflections on it per week along with your homework, beginning September 28th.

If you plan to sign up for the 4th credit, you must get approval from me and then e-mail Amy Marchitto, amarchitto@work.rutgers.edu at the LSER Credit Office to register for it.

Please note: I strongly support doing community service but for the purposes of the class, the practicum must be with an organization engaged in organizing. Do you have one in mind? Here are some suggestions:

Campus organizations: AFT/AAUP, URA, Rutgers One Coalition, Students for Justice in Palestine, NJPIRG and whatever other campus organizations you are connected to

Specific community organizations and unions that are partnering with the class: NJ Organizing Project, New Labor, Make the Road NJ, SEIU 32BJ, Work Environment Council, Time to Care Coalition/ New Jersey Citizen Action

Other organizations we can try: Planned Parenthood, Unity Square, Black Lives Matter, New Jersey Communities United, Wind of the Spirit, New Jersey Working Families, CWA, New Jersey AFL-CIO, other gender, racial, environmental and social justice organizations.

Essays: Students will write two short essays based upon their reflections on the main issues and themes that emerged in the readings, lectures, role plays and class discussions. Please remember that you MUST substantively refer to several different class readings pertaining to the question (this means you cannot just mention the article, you must engage with it).

Essay #1: What is power? Where does it come from? What is the relationship between power and social change?

DUE:

Essay #2: What is organizing? What are the most essential elements of building an organization? What is the difference between organizing and mobilizing? What is the relationship between organizing and social change?

DUE:

Group Assignment

Strategy Chart: Over the course of the second half of the semester, student groups of 5 students per group will collectively choose an issue and then meet weekly to work on each column of the strategy chart.

Students will need to work on the chart and conduct research on the issue and the components of the chart outside of class and during finals week will present a power point of a full strategy chart, along with a timeline and written campaign plan in lieu of a final exam. To ensure that all group participants are contributing, students will be asked to grade their peers.

DUE: Draft: Goals, Organizational Considerations, Preliminary Research List: October 26, 2022

DUE: Draft: Allies, Constituents and Opponents and Actual Research: November 9, 2022

DUE: Draft: Targets, Tactics and Message: November 30, 2022

FINAL FULL ASSIGNMENT DUE: December 7, 2022

Attendance: Class meets only once a week and I cover a lot.

When you miss class, you miss out on presentations, role plays, exercises and group discussions that are essential to learning how to organize—it's not something you can make up and I can't re-run everything I covered in class just for you, that's why attendance is mandatory. You should have no unexcused absences. Of course, I will understand if you are sick or have an emergency if you communicate with me about it in a timely manner. Believe it or not, I've had students miss almost the entire semester's worth of classes and then show up and ask if they can hand in the homework and pass the class!

You must also arrive at class on time. I know the buses make it hard, I know parking is difficult and mass transit can be delayed, please build that in so you can make it on time. I have some students who are habitually late and after a while, there are consequences.

One-on-Ones and Class Discussions:

- The richness of our larger conversations will be dependent upon having done the reading and bringing thoughts and ideas to the larger discussion. Please don't be a "free rider" take part in our conversations and in your small groups.
- Each week at the start of class, students will engage in a one-on-one conversation with each other. I'll put a question up on the screen for you to discuss.
