COURSE DESCRIPTION:

This course explores the history of the labor movement in the U.S. from 1880 to 1945. Course themes include the sources and forms of conflict between workers and employers; changes in technology, production, and workplace organization in an evolving capitalist economy; the impact of racism and sexism on the labor movement; the different types of unions and worker organizations which were formed in this period; and the on-going debate over the goals and purposes of unions.

Although unions are not the exclusive focus of the course, we will closely study how labor unions were affected by changes in our economy, political system, and culture, as well as how working people and their unions impacted and shaped these systems. Through this process of mutual interaction, who labor unions represented, what they sought to accomplish in the short- and long-term, and how they attempted to reach their goals evolved. At the same time, the basic purpose of the labor movement - to defend and advance the interests of working people vis-à-vis powerful employers and a government which often supported employers - remained unchanged.

In this course, we will look at how the labor movement's ability to improve their members' living standards and working conditions widely fluctuated from 1880 to 1945. In the late 19th and early 20th centuries unions were relatively weak most of the time, almost marginal in their influence. However, in response to the crisis conditions of the Great Depression of the 1930s, workers organized powerful unions and became a central element of a new, progressive coalition which reshaped our economy and political system.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES:

Rutgers University and the School of Management and Labor Relations (SMLR) have established the following learning objectives for this course:

From the Rutgers University Core Curriculum: HST, SCL, WCR and WCD

- Explain the development of some aspect of society or culture over time. (HST-1).
- Understand different theories about human culture, social identity, economic entities, political systems and other forms of social organization. (SCL-1).
- Communicate complex ideas effectively, in standard written English, to a general audience, and respond effectively to editorial feedback from peers, instructors, and/or supervisors through successive drafts and revision. (WCR).
- Communicate effectively in modes appropriate to a discipline or area of inquiry; Evaluate and critically assess sources and the use of conventions of attribution and citation correctly; and analyze and synthesize information and ideas from multiple sources to generate new insights. (WCD).

From the School of Management and Labor Relations (SMLR):

- Knowledge of Theory, Practice and Application – including:
 - Analyze the degree to which forms of human difference shape a person’s experience of and perspectives on work
 - Analyze a contemporary global issue in their field from a multi-disciplinary and intersectional perspective
 - Analyze issues related to business strategies, organizational structures, and work systems
 - Analyze issues of social justice related to work across local and global contexts
- Professional Development – including:
 - Develop effective presentation skills appropriate for different settings and audiences
 - Develop career management skills to navigate one’s career
 - Develop capabilities to work and lead in a multicultural and diverse environment
 - Work productively in teams, in social networks, and on an individual basis
 - Develop cultural agility competencies
 - Demonstrate lifelong personal and professional development skills

Instructor’s Learning Objectives:

In addition to the learning objectives listed above, the following learning objectives are based on the specific topics and issues covered in the course:

- Understand the critical role of the labor movement in our society.
- Recognize why and how workers have formed different types of labor organizations.
- Demonstrate an understanding of how workers and their organizations (including unions) have been shaped by the larger society of which they are a part but have also contributed to changing the larger society.

Statement on Disabilities: Rutgers University welcomes students with disabilities into all of the University's educational programs. In order to receive consideration for reasonable accommodations, a student with a disability must contact the appropriate disability services office at the campus where you are officially enrolled, participate in an intake interview, and provide documentation: <https://ods.rutgers.edu/students/documentation-guidelines>. If the documentation supports your request for reasonable accommodations, your campus's disability services office will provide you with a Letter of Accommodations. Please share this letter with your instructors and discuss the accommodations with them as early in your courses as possible. To begin this process, please complete the Registration form on the ODS web site at: <https://ods.rutgers.edu/students/registration-form>.
